SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 6, 1861.

THE crowd of important news and business exceeds our space this morning, without comments. The Government is certainly showing its teeth in threatening style, to which the imponetrable secresy of its councils, and the marvellous coolness of its bearing from the first, have added a formidable look of weight and force. The adoption of this sui den energy and rapidity of military action, at the memout the new loan had been epened with its decisive manifestation of public conidence, and also, as it is rumored, immedi staly on the return of secret agents who have already secertained that England and France will not abet in any manuer the atrosions treason of the seceding conspir ators, nor the barbarous ends for which it was undertaken-are co-incidences supposed to indicate the development of a predetermined policy which had been held waiting only for a survey of the field. I bere is, how ever, no reason to apprehend invision or "co ercion" of the rebellious states-unless to re pel attack is held an offensive act, according to the new-fangled theory of a non-res stant gevernment. As little will the enemies of th ir country find their theory of a "truce" - which would be violated by any act or preparation for self-defence on the part of the Union they are in arms against- respected by the United States, which now begins once more to look like one of the powers of the world. The simple truth probably is, that the intention of the "Confederates" to attack the southern forts, has become too evident and too imminent to permit the least delay in sending decisive reinforcements wherever they can be made available. We should not be surprised i the rebels were allowed to put themselves in the disadvantageous position of assailants of Fort Sumter, instead of relieving them by its evacuation. The surmise that all the southern ports are to be at once blockaded, we judge to be premature, at least.

Without remark then, we commend the news to our readers. Every available vessel is under sealed orders, and fitting out with the beariest possible munitions of war, and with a dispatch which allows no interruption for food or sleep. The steamships Baltic and Adriatic are purchased by the Government, for war purpeece of course. Troops are rapidly concentrating at this port-nearly 3,000 aiready collected,-and as many more coming from Texas, which looks as if that interesting and amiable community would seen find its bands full in dealing with its own congenial neighbors. At the same time the indications of the im mediate movement of the troops from here are unmistakeable, but nothing points towards their destination or direction. Unfortunately for the conspirators, they have now no "pals" in the Cabinet to keep them informed of the secrets of the Government, and we are all alike in the dark. May the Gop of our fathers direct, inspire and sustain the men who now hold in trust the honor of our hitherto glo rious country, and the destinies of our poster-

THE America's mails bring the importan news of the resignation of Count CAVOUR, and the other members of the Sardinian Cabinet, with a view to its reconstruction on an en larged basis that will embrace all the consolidated Italian states.

REPORTS from Washington indicate that all the southern ports of importance will very soon be blockeded. The foreign representatives are said to sympathize with the decided stand taken by the Government.

WM. H. RUSSELL, correspondent of the London Times, is about to leave Washington for the South. He appears more puzzled by the complications of American politics than he was by the Crimean and Indian campaigns. The army and navy news published in our paper today is significant.

Ramors were current in the strests, vesterday, and general'y credited, that agents were dis hed to England and France by the Administra tion, immediately after it came into power, to as certain the views of these governments on Ameri can affairs, and, particularly, whether they would stand by the United States in the event of an armet attempt to put down rebaliez, and refuse to recog nize a S .uibrra C .nfederacy. It is said that these agents have returned, and bring the most favorab's reports; that both Engand and Prance will set their faces against a Slave Confederacy, and in no manner recognize or assis it. It is fur her said that the delay of the Admi nistration to declare its policy has been in part occasioned by a desire to learn the result of these missions, and now that the position of those European powers is understood to be all that could be wished, the President and his Cabinet are determined to take immediate and vigo:ous mes sures for the enforcement of the laws, at all haz-

MONEY AND BLOOD! -MONEY AND BLOOD!" Strange words to come from the lips of a beauti he woman. Frem one whose rare, imperial beauty as-c. rded well with the luxuriant surroundings which cucircled her. From one whose face expressed in-telligence, whose look was gentle, whose voice only was lew and hosty, as if it rees from some cheking passion in her bosom.

"The case to give me power over law and man—the other to quench—so, not to quench, but to as mage my thirst for revenge! Wronged by man!—soomed man!—what should I live for, but for memor and And she who uttered these words in the purior of

And she who uttered these words in the purior of as gine a house as could be seen in upper New York, rese from a velvet-cushioned sofa, and paced mervously to and fro over the Brusels carpet, with a moliciless step. She was apparently not over twenty, or twenty-two or three years of age, tall, suparily formed, and finely featured. Her rather pale face looked yet the more white because she was drossed in black. There was a sincle band of velvet bound, abcut her heavy block hair, and in its centre, over her forehead, gleamed a large eye-shaped ruby, se brilliant that it seemed like living fire. But even su bright was the fire which bentred in her great black eyes, as her thoughts seemed to intensify into assettement. And a color, not like a binch, or the crimson glew of pleasure, come out on her sheek. crimson glew of pleasure, come out on her check.

It was dark—almost to a purple hue—as if flores bleed burned there.
